VERMONT LEGISLATURE ON TRACK TO BE FIRST TO LEGALIZE MARIJUANA

Liberal-leaning Vermont could become the first U.S. state to legalize recreational marijuana use through legislation, rather than by voter initiative, in a move that advocates for the drug said could speed its acceptance across the nation. State representatives this month are set to take up a bill passed by the state Senate in February that would allow adults over 21 to purchase and smoke the drug beginning in 2018. The move follows a year of hearings in the Senate that lawmakers said allowed them to closely consider appropriate limits to place on the drug's use. The current proposal would prohibit users from growing plants at home and ban the sale of edible products containing marijuana extracts. REUTERS

AMTRAK TRAIN DERAILS IN KANSAS, 32 HURT

2 Seven cars on a Chicago-bound Amtrak passenger train derailed in southwestern Kansas early on Monday, injuring 32 people, officials said. The coaches from Amtrak's Southwest Chief Train 4 traveling from Los Angeles to Chicago derailed about 20 miles west of Dodge City shortly after midnight, Amtrak said in a statement. There were 131 passengers and 14 crew aboard. Thirty-two passengers were taken to hospitals in Dodge City and Garden City; 29 had been released by midmorning, Amtrak said. Other passengers were taken to a recreation center in Cimarron before being provided alternate transportation. REUTERS

PUTIN ORDERS RUSSIAN FORCES' WITHDRAWAL FROM SYRIA

3 Russian President Vladimir Putin said he was instructing his armed forces to start pulling out of Syria, more than five months after he ordered the launch of a military operation that shored up his ally, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad. Putin, at a meeting in the Kremlin with his defense and foreign ministers, said Russian military forces in Syria had largely fulfilled their objectives and ordered an intensification of Russia's diplomatic efforts to broker a peace deal in the country. But the Russian leader signaled Moscow would keep a military presence: He did not give a deadline for the completion of the withdrawal and said Russian forces would stay on at the port of Tartous and at the Hmeimim air base in Syria's Latakia province. Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said Putin had telephoned Assad to inform him of the Russian decision. REUTERS

Parade organizers sue city over route

They aim to get the parade route restored to its original length after officials halved it.

CHRIS CAESAR
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Organizers of the city's 115th annual St. Patrick's Day parade filed an emergency injunction Monday aimed at restoring the parade's route to its original length, after a decision by Mayor Marty Walsh more than halved the original route.

"After consulting with [Boston Police] Commissioner [William] Evans, I have decided that it is in the best interest of public safety, while balancing the historic tradition of the St. Patrick's Day parade, to use the same route that we did last year for this year's parade," Walsh said in a statement.

The truncated path was implemented last year after a historically awful winter ground the city to a halt.

The original route, which passed by veterans memorials and winded along South Boston streets for about 3 miles, is now shortened to about 1.4 miles, prompting outrage from parade revelers.

Messages to parade organizers were not immediately returned, but a post on the group's Facebook page said organizers were "swarmed by people" who objected to the new route, and encouraged those concerned to reach out to the mayor's office.

"This shortens the parade by over 2 miles and forces spectators to stuff onto the sidewalks on Broadway to view our event, while taking away the right of many South Boston residents to view it from the comfort of their own homes and neighborhoods," organizers wrote. "Lastly, it takes away the very important landmarks that our parade participants march past in order march past the Dorchester Heights National Historical Site during their 115th annual parade, which is organized and paid for every year by the South Boston Veterans and their supporters."

Attorney Chester Darling, who filed the suit, was not available for comment late Monday.

The shorter route meant less impacts on residents of the South Boston neighborhood, a statement explaining the decision from the Boston Police Department reads.

"We used about 150 less officers last year than in previous years," the statement explained. "With officers deployed closer together and along a smaller route, we are able to make the event that much safer."

City officials also point-

The post went on to say that organizers are "shocked and dissatisfied" with the change and that they got "no straight answer from city officials as to why the route was changed, or why they are not letting veterans

Other parades were also subject to recent route adjustments: the Caribbean Festival Jovert parade, the Allston Brighton parade route, the First Night procession route and the Greek parade route. Similar changes are under consideration for the Dorchester Day parade and Charlestown's Bunker Hill parade.

The St. Patrick's Day parade, organized by the South Boston Allied War Veteran Council, is no stranger to controversy: Former Boston Mayor Tom Menino famously boycotted the parade for two decades due to its exclusion of gay and lesbian groups.

Walsh reversed that trend and marched in the parade last year, after the council agreed to invite OUTVETS, a veterans organization supporting former members of the military in the LGBT community.

Whatever the route, the historic parade is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. on March 20 in South Boston.

Boston-area renters warned after scams

Some false listings can linger on Craigslist for 20 hours, enough time to victimize prospective renters in competitive housing markets.

Boston-area renters are being warned to avoid online leasing scams after several recent incidents have triggered an official investigation.

Suffolk County prosecutors and Boston police detectives have been investigating recent claims that victims responding to online apartment listings on sites such as Craigslist were, in fact, having their initial payments stolen, according to a statement from the Suffolk County DA's office.

"The process of renting an apartment and moving into a new home is stressful enough," Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel F. Conley was quoted in the statement. "I urge every renter to do careful research before entering into any agreement to ensure you're getting what you paid for."

Recent scams operated by having an applicant send a payment for a unit in an online advertisement that was placed by someone posing as the rightful owner, the DA's office explained. The renter would then arrive to find the apartment already occupied.

The district attorney's warning comes just weeks after NYU's Tandon School of Engineering published a report stating that Craigslist fails to identify more than half of its scam rental listings. Some false listings can linger on the site for 20 hours, enough time to victimize prospective renters in competitive housing markets.

"We ask that people using online services to rent apartments in Boston use caution," Boston Police Commissioner William B. Evans was quoted in the DA's statement. "By taking a few extra steps you can reduce your chances of becoming a victim of this type of scam."

The DA recommended that apartment-shoppers work with licensed real estate professionals, meet landlords in person and avoid sending payments until the recipient has been verified.

Municipal Court evac after bomb threat

A Boston court was evacuated after authorities received a bomb threat. Police said that the bomb squad responded to a threat made Monday against the Boston Municipal Court, Fox reported. Authorities arrived at the 24 New Chardon St. location after receiving the phoned-in threat around 10:40 a.m., according to NECN. Dozens of people were standing outside the courthouse at midday as authorities investigated at the location, Fox added. Shortly after noon they were allowed to go back inside the courthouse. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

Baker signs law to restrict Rx drugs, curb opioid use

The governor plans for the new restrictions to go into effect immediately.

Gov. Charlie Baker has signed a bill designed to reduce opioid abuse in the state in part by limiting prescription drugs' availability.

On Monday morning, Baker signed into law new legislation that will put stronger mechanisms in place to combat drug abuse, including limits on first-time painkiller prescriptions and a requirement for schools to verbally screen students for drug use, WHDH reported.

killer prescription will now be capped at a seven-day supply, WCVB reported in a related article. The new law also allows patients to fill only a portion of their painkiller prescriptions at one time.

The governor wanted new opioid-abuse legislation as the state struggled to overcome a trend of opioid deaths, WCVB stated. Gov. Baker said that four people in Massachusetts die every day from opioids.

The governor plans for the new restrictions to go into effect immediately, according to WHDH.

The newly signed bill was passed unanimously by the Massachusetts House and Senate last week, WCVB added.

Three brothers in custody in Maryland police officer slaying

Three brothers were in custody on Monday in connection with the fatal shooting of a Washington-area police officer, authorities said.

Prince George's County Police Officer First Class Jacai Colson, 28, was shot in an exchange of fire with a gunman who began shooting outside police headquarters on Sunday, apparently without provocation.

The attack left the suspected gunman wounded, police said. The second suspect was believed to have accompanied the shooter but left the scene before the shooting occurred, according to investigators.

The third suspect's alleged role was unclear. The brothers' names have not been released.

Jacai Colson / PRINCE GEORGE COUNTY POLICE DEPARTMENT HANDOUT

"The evidence shows the gunman intended to die in a battle with police," the Prince George's department said on Twitter. A police spokesman declined to elaborate but said more details would be released at a press conference on Tuesday.

Colson was a four-year veteran and had been a narcotics detective in Prince George's County, which borders the District of Columbia.

Investigators are looking for a motive, police said.

Police Chief Henry Stawinski told reporters on Sunday that the gunman apparently opened fire on the first officer he saw outside the headquarters' district station in Landover. He continued shooting as Colson and other officers responded, the chief said.

The shooting was the second fatal attack on law enforcement officers in the area in little more than a month. Two Harford County sheriff's deputies were shot by a gunman at a restaurant near Baltimore on Feb. 10. REUTERS

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

Trump looks set for big wins

GETTY IMAGES

Trump supporters and protesters have clashed at his rallies in recent days, fueling accusations that he has created an ugly atmosphere with his campaign invective against groups such as Mexican immigrants and Muslims.

Donald Trump faced a last day of campaigning on Monday before a crucial round of nominating contests including in Florida and Ohio, where establishment Republicans worked to trip him up.

Trump, who has rejected accusations he is to blame for the tensions, has emerged from the early nominating contests with a clear lead in the number of delegates needed to win the party nomination for the Nov. 8 election.

He is trailed by Ted

Cruz, a senator from Texas, and could seize control of the race with big wins in Tuesday's voting in Ohio, Florida, Illinois, Missouri and North Carolina.

Opinion polls also showed him with comfortable leads in all those states, except Ohio, where he is roughly tied with the state's governor, John Kasich.

Kasich, trailing in the delegate count and seen as needing to win in his home state to stay in the race, was getting campaign help on Monday from Mitt Romney, who was the party's 2012 presidential candidate and who delivered a furious attack on Trump this month.

Trump, a real estate magnate and former reality television star, has fired up enthusiastic crowds with his promise to "make America great again." But he has bucked Republican orthodoxy on policies including free trade and offended a range of Americans with his calls to temporarily ban Muslims from the country and deport illegal immigrants.

In Florida, Sen. Marco Rubio, a favorite of the party establishment, has staked his survival in the campaign on winning there in his home state. He has also suggested a tactical vote to stop Trump — encouraging his supporters in Ohio to cast their vote for Kasich.

Trump scheduled appearances in North Carolina, Ohio and Florida on Monday, after several days of events marked by outbreaks of shouting and shoving between supporters and protesters, who decry what they call his bigoted and divisive rhetoric.

Trump canceled a big rally in Chicago on Friday evening over security after protesters swarmed the event, sparking clashes. On Saturday, he was rushed by a man on an Ohio stage and repeatedly blamed Bernie Sanders, a candidate in the Democratic race, for the protesters' actions. REUTERS

Inside Kasich's long-shot strategy to beat Trump for the GOP nomination

Microphone in hand, Republican John Kasich promised the crowd inside a high-tech Ohio factory Saturday that he'll never be beholden to Washington insiders if he wins the White House.

But as he zigzags across the state before Ohio's GOP primary on Tuesday — emboldened by polls showing him edging ahead of rival Donald Trump — Kasich may soon need all the Washington insiders he can get.

Behind the scenes, strategists for Kasich, the Ohio governor, are studying arcane party rules that they believe could offer a path to the Republican nomination if he wins his home state, his aides said.

It is a long-shot strategy, both for Kasich and the anti-Trump forces inside the party. But if fellow GOP candidate Marco Rubio loses his own state of Florida on Tuesday — as polls predict — a surge by Kasich may be the only viable strategy for Republicans looking to stop Trump from getting the 1,237 delegates needed to

Republican presidential candidate Ohio Gov. John Kasich GETTY IMAGES

"The plan is to win Ohio, and some other states, and if that happens, nobody is going to have enough delegates to win the nomination on the first ballot."

John Weaver, Kasich's chief campaign strategist clinch the nomination.

A loss by Rubio, a senator, will almost certainly end his struggling candidacy. If Trump wins both Ohio and Florida, the New York real estate mogul's march to the nomination will be all but assured.

The Kasich camp sees a Rubio loss in Florida opening up a different possibility — the first contested convention held by either party since 1952.

Kasich supporters are betting that an Ohio win will give his candidacy its first real momentum, attracting donors and endorsements. From there, he could score more victories in upcoming primaries in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Wisconsin, Connecticut and California, states where Kasich polls favorably. REUTERS

Zendaya shuts down another critic

When will comedians and commentators learn that if you come for Zendaya, expect to lose? Apparently that was a lesson that needed to be taught to "Difficult People" star Julie Klausner, who took issue with Zendaya's appearance accepting an award at the 2016 Kids' Choice Awards, calling the 19-year-old "K.C. Undercover" star a "thinspo model for your impressionable tweens" on Twitter. "You don't have to have an eating disorder to attend the Kids' Choice Awards

... but it helps," Klausner added. Zendaya, never one to shy away from a social media squabble, offered to "educate" Klausner before siccing her 6.39 million Twitter followers on the comedian. "Now, everyone go look in the mirror at their beautiful body and love that s—," she added.

Richard Simmons is not a prisoner in his own home

A story started making the rounds this weekend that ebullient fitness guru Richard Simmons was a prisoner in his own home, his entire life being controlled by parties taking advantage of his fragile mental and physical state. But he thinks that story's just plain nuts.

"No one is holding me in my house as a hostage," Simmons tells the "Today" show via telephone. "You know, I do what I want to do as I've always done, so people should sort of just believe what I have to say because, like, I'm Richard Simmons." That's pretty tough logic to argue with. As for whether his longtime housekeeper was keeping him prisoner and controlling all aspects of his life, keeping friends away? "That's just very silly," he insists. "Teresa Reveles has been with me for 30 years. It's almost like we're a married couple." So ... yes? But OK, Richard, are you not free to speak freely? Is Teresa in the room with you? Just give us some sort of signal if you're in distress.

Ian McShane has harsh words for 'Game of Thrones' spoiler scolds

Ian McShane knows that he's given away some major spoilers about his role on the new season of "Game of Thrones," but he honestly can't be bothered about it, so calm down, nerds. "You say the slightest thing and the Internet goes ape," McShane tells the Telegraph. "I was accused of giving the plot away, but I just think, get a f—ing life. It's only t—s and dragons." Which, incidentally, was HBO's suggestion to George R.R. Martin as an alternate title for the series. And I don't know, wouldn't the world be a slightly better place if we were discussing possible spoilers for the new season of "Only T—s and Dragons" instead?

We should be worried about Aaron Carter

Former teen pop star Aaron Carter seems to be getting more erratic with each passing day. Maybe it's time we stepped in and intervened. First, last month, he declared his endorsement for Donald Trump. Then he made it sound like he was withdrawing his endorsement over Trump's spotty LGBT record. Then, in a new GQ interview, he doubled-down on his support of Trump. Plus he got a neck tattoo, and last week he was caught on camera by TMZ getting out of his car in Malibu to yell at a fellow motorist who'd honked at him. Oh, and he's had to spend his whole life being Aaron Carter. That's a lot for one little guy to handle. Should we call someone? Maybe the woman who it turns out wasn't actually keeping Richard Simmons captive?

Metric's measures for success

Lead singer Emily Haines on Brooklyn gentrification and being immortalized by Brie Larson.

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

It is a sunny, warm winter's day when Canadian indie rock band Metric's tour bus pulls into a one-street town in Oklahoma. But these days, the road veterans who released their sixth studio album, "Pagans in Vegas," last fall, don't take a backwater stop like this for granted.

"We get to see so much of the country and we see how much has been homogenized," says Emily Haines. "We've never had much chance to reflect, because it's always been so go, go, go."

The band has been on what Haines describes as a decade and a half of serendipitous happenings — like working with composer Howard Shore

Metric is back with a sixth studio album and new tour. NORMAN WONG for "Twilight," and director Edgar Wright basing 2010's "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World" on Metric. "Brie Larson's character is based on me, supposedly," Haines says.

"This life sounds ridiculous unless you're doing it," she adds about touring. "But we've been doing it for 15 years. I think it might be my life."

She could be right; even in her private life, itchy feet drive her. Haines says while Toronto is "a permanent hub," she's called New York City home for seven years. But that's about to change: "Our block got bought and we all got evicted," she explains. "My guy and I will get a place in Berlin. This has been my second round with New York. I was in Williamsburg and saw that whole shift. I feel you have to either buy in or get out. of a city."

The band members are up for making the distance between them work. Haines made her contribution to the new album while she was in Nicaragua and Jimmy Shaw was in Toronto.

"I often have the desire to disappear somewhere," she says. "There's nothing like getting in a helicopter and going into the jungle to get over yourself. While Jimmy is in his studio using all these cool instruments, I'll come back with something raw I've done on a beaten up guitar. He'll have created this whole symphony and the two end up working."

On the right road

An innovative program is helping struggling and disconnected young adults get on their feet.

ALIZAH SALARIO
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Attending camp and getting that first summer job are traditional rites of passage among America's youth.

But for those who come of age in poverty, struggle with addiction or grow up in the foster care system, youth is often defined by obstacles and uncertainty, not opportunities. Y Roads, a program started in 2013 by the YMCA of Greater New York in partnership with the nonprofit Opportunities for a Better Tomorrow and the Department of Education, provides solid ground for vulnerable and disconnected young adults.

In New York City alone, there are a quarter of a million 17-to-24-year-olds who are "disconnected," meaning they are not attending school or working. Y Roads enrolls students within this age range to help them "press the reset button," says Lauren Barr, senior executive of Youth and Family, School & Branch Based Programs at the YMCA.

The program serves roughly 450 kids and young adults among four Y Roads centers at

New York City YMCAs. Participants spend anywhere from 20 to 40 weeks in the program, during which time they are connected with counselors, resources and opportunities to develop job skills and enroll in a high school equivalency test prep program. Many have dropped out of high school and some come in with barely a high school literacy level, says Barr.

Participants often find Y Roads through word of mouth, and the program partners with service agencies to connect with those who have been in the foster care system, previously incarcerated or the child of someone incarcerated, says Nicole Kourbage-Wilson, the Di-

"We connect them to leadership opportunities so they can see themselves potentially as change agents, not only for themselves but for the community as a whole."

Students in the Y Roads program get schooled in work and life. CHASI ANNEXY rector of the YouthBuild program at the Jamaica Y Roads center.

"A lot of these young people, once connected to resources, are completely and totally motivated to no longer engage in these kind of lifestyles," says Kourbage-Wilson. "We connect them to leadership opportunities so they can see themselves represented, and they can see themselves potentially as change agents, not only for themselves but for the community as a whole."

Kourbage-Wilson recalls one Y Roads participant, a 21-year-old mother who walked through the door of the South Bronx center seeking job training. She was connected with a mental health counselor and a case manager, and had child care provided so she was able to attend classes and get job training. While still in the program, she obtained a job in retail.

Y Roads helps participants prepare for various jobs, and recently partnered with a local Starbucks to develop a program for participants interested in customer service.

The program also recreates rites of passage that participants may have missed out on, such as a prom and a weekend-long camp in upstate New York that teaches them team building and leadership.

These "developmental time-stamps," says Kourbage-Wilson, are part of what helps participants invest in and learn about themselves — in the classroom and beyond.

The Science of Success

Are you looking for a focused employee with critical thinking skills, analytical ability, communication skills, data competency, and comfort with the unknown? Hire a science major.

The numbers in support of an undergraduate degree in natural and applied sciences are clear. According to MassBio's 2015 year-end report, Massachusetts has continued to outpace the rest of the nation with regard to biopharma employment growth; increasing by 28.4% over the past 10 years.

While the direct employment opportunities for graduates in the life sciences in Massachusetts are numerous, what may be less clear to employers is the broadly applicable set of skills that are developed within science majors: skills that are easily applied to positions in across education, management, human services organizations, and in public service.

Killer skills: scientific training is infused with academic materials and exercises which require students to examine, question, test and reimagine their assumptions. Graduates with a firm grasp of the scientific process often excel in creative problem solving in a wide range of applications. In fact, over 30% of CEO's in Fortune's Most Powerful Women in Business list hold degrees in science.

Communication counts: Comfort with the scientific process is only part of the equation. Science and technology programs must also focus on integrating science with written and oral communication skills, group work and interpersonal interaction. This essential combination of high-touch-high-tech provides the vital combination of skills expected of the 21st Century employee. At Cambridge College they add touch to the tech in their new undergraduate degree in Natural and Applied Sciences. For 45 years Cambridge College has been a national leader in student-centered higher education with an emphasis on integrating academic scholarship with teamwork, diversity and communication. See how they are shaping the leaders of tomorrow. Visit them at their upcoming Information Session on Tuesday, March 15th at 6pm on their main campus located at 1000 Massachusetts Avenue in Cambridge.

WHEN SCHOOLS SAY THEY OFFER STUDENT SUPPORT, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

It could mean a lot of different things. At Bay State College it means we understand that going back to school is a big decision. And, it means we understand your concerns about succeeding at the college level. That's why, regardless of how you see yourself doing in college, we see an opportunity to help you realize your potential with a community of support.

What else does it mean? It means that admissions counselors can show off our campus, answer your questions and guide you through our selection process—even before you apply. It means helping 95 percent of this year's freshman class receive grants or scholarships that don't have to be repaid. It means personal success coordinators and a closely-knit student body that can help make America's biggest college town feel a little more like home.

In the classroom, it means a wide variety of Associates and Bachelor's degree programs in such in-demand fields as healthcare, business, fashion, criminal justice and more. No matter which program you choose, it means learning in small classes from accessible professors with real-world experience in their field.

To fit your schedule, it means making classes available at night or online.

As you advance toward your degree, it means having a personal career advancement team. It means helping you write cover letters and resumes, creating mock job interviews and using social media to help you get noticed. It means internships at some of Boston's best companies and organizations to build working relationships with people that can help you find a full-time position doing what you love.

In the end, what does it all mean? It means that at Bay State College, we care as much about your comfort as we do your success. It means we're committed to providing you unmatched student support throughout your college journey. It means that going back to school doesn't mean going it alone.

In short, it means Bay State is the right choice for you.

Just a few of the celebrities Jason Walsh has trained.
GETTY IMAGES

MAKE HEALTHY YOUR NEW HAPPY

The new fitness craze sweeping Hollywood

Jessica Biel, Justin Timberlake, Ashley Greene and Hilary Duff all swear by it.

EMILY LAURENCE @EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metrolus

You think your trainer has it tough? It's Jason Walsh's job to get celebrities in shape for blockbuster roles. He prepped Matt Damon for the "Bourne" movies, Bradley Cooper for "American Sniper" and, most recently, John Krasinski for "13 Hours."

"It's a huge responsibility," Walsh tells us. "You never know how things are going to end up and if you hurt someone or stall the process of production, that's millions of dollars lost." But good news for anyone who has something about their body they want to fix: Even celebrities have body issues. Walsh tells us that 100 percent of his celeb clients come to him with an issue that needs addressing. Yes, including Bradley Cooper. We got Walsh to reveal what really works:

Skip the bootcamp

noticed that his clients kept coming to him with the same problem: Their bodies were overworked from group workout classes — especially trendy bootcamp style ones.

He went on a mission to find a way to provide an intense workout without overworking any one area of the body and found the solution in a versaclimber, a vertical climbing cardio machine that works the upper and lower body.

"The crawling motion — which we've progressed from as babies — balances the body out," Walsh explains. "It's low impact and super effective." It's also not easy. Climbing requires a lot of oxygen and energy, which Walsh says makes people burn twice as many calories as they would doing another type of workout.

Making it fun

After his "a-ha" moment with the versaclimber, Walsh created routines and group classes utilizing the versaclimber. He opened a fitness studio, Rise Nation, in Hollywood and is hoping to open a New York City location within the next couple years.

Music plays a huge role into Rise Nation. "I was at a concert and just blown away by the visuals," Walsh says. "I was jumping around and having a good time and by the end, I was soaking wet with sweat. I didn't even realize it was a workout because I was having such a good time."

To mirror that in his Rise Nation classes, the versaclimber routines he uses in the class are timed to music and he also uses various lighting concepts to create a club-like environment that can serve as a distraction to the intense workout. Hey, whatever gets your mind off of the intensity, right?

How to get the same results

Versaclimbers take up a lot of room, are expensive and not many gyms have them, but the same concept can be applied with indoor rock climbing, which is available in most cities. With so many celebrities turning to these climbing-based moves, we predict rock climbing to be one of the year's biggest fitness trends.

Relieve Workplace Stress in 30 Minutes or Less

Brought to you by the beauty consultants at CARE Laser

With fairer weather in the air, and the prospect of beautiful spring and summer days ahead, the idea that we will continue to be cooped up all day at work is almost too much for many of us to bear. Your friends at CARE Laser understand and are here to help. To celebrate the end of the stressful days of winter, we've put together a list of four easy ways you can escape the work day grind, reduce stress, and recharge for whatever lies ahead — all in just 30 minutes or less.

4 Tips for Reducing Workplace Stress and Doldrums from CARE Laser

1. Walk off the stress (and extra pounds). Cruise along city streets window-shopping, enjoy a scenic walk along the river, or take a jaunt around your neighborhood with the dog. Getting out for even a half hour stroll really can make a difference not just in how you feel, but in how you look as well. According to the Mayo Clinic, a daily walk can help maintain a healthy weight, prevent or manage various conditions, including heart disease, high blood pressure and type 2 diabetes, strengthen your bones, and improve your balance and coordination. Plus, the fresh air and physical movement will lift your mood; making you more positive about the work you need to do when you get back.

2. So you say you never have time to read anything? If Warren Buffett, one of today's most successful men in the business world, describes his typical day as sitting and reading, then we feel pretty confident you can find 30 minutes for that book collecting dust on your desk or in your briefcase. There are great benefits to reading including challenging your brain and making you smarter, dramatically lowering stress levels, and encouraging positive thinking. Hmmm, sounds like a win-win for both your personal and work life! The best place to lose yourself in a book during work hours? CARE Laser suggests finding a quiet, shady spot on a park bench, in your office courtyard, or anywhere there's green space.

3. Meditate anxiety away. Not only is meditation accessible to everyone, you can do it virtually anywhere, anytime — on a walk, commuting on a bus or train, waiting in line. And given all of the emotional and physical benefits of meditation, you may want to try it soon. When you meditate, says the Mayo Clinic, you clear away the information overload that builds up every day and contributes to your stress. Spending even just a few minutes in peaceful meditation can wash away any anxiety, tension or worry caused by undue stressors at work. So, the next time you are in the middle of a difficult business meeting, CARE Laser recommends to silently ammmmm your way to tranquility.

4. Hair-free=Stress-free! Now that the weather is getting nicer, you're going to be pulling out those more revealing clothes, which means more "emergency" shaving sessions when you're already running late. At CARE Laser, we understand that over the winter you may have let things get a little stubbly, fuzzy, or even bushy. There's no need to panic though. We are ready and waiting to help you thin out or get rid of unwanted hair in just a few sessions with our exclusive laser technology, the Soprano Ice Laser from 'Alma'. Think this sounds like a painful, time-consuming, and costly way to spend your lunch break? Not at all! You'll thoroughly enjoy and relax in our inviting, spa-like beauty center. Depending on the body area you want to focus on, you're often in-and-out of your session in less than 20 minutes. Plus, our award-winning laser is virtually pain-free and our innovative and flexible payment programs are aimed at making hair removal accessible to everyone. See how easy and stress-free the hair removal process can be — call us today for a FREE consultation at 617-338-5188.

Whichever way you decide to relieve stress this spring, your friends at CARE Laser hope it involves breaking free of that desk and computer, getting some well-deserved Vitamin D, and taking that full 30 minute lunch break you deserve.

Top players to watch

Who will steal the national spotlight this March?

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

Before Stephen Curry was winning NBA titles and generally changing the face of pro basketball as we know it, he was the darling of the Big Dance.

In 2008, Curry led tiny Davidson to upset victories over Gonzaga, Georgetown and Wisconsin before narrowly falling to eventual national champion, Kansas. As much as the team that wins it all is remembered forever, there are certain players who leave a lasting impact on the NCAA tournament each year. Here are the candidates most likely to make multiple appearances in the 2016 edition of "One Shining Moment."

Buddy Hield

Hield is most likely going to walk away with the National Player of the Year award and he's already shown the ability to create magic in March. In the Big 12 tournament last week, Hield hit a halfcourt miracle that looked as though it lifted Oklahoma past West Virginia. Hield was just a fraction of a second late with his shot, but the image has been planted — Hield is capable of doing legit damage in this tournament. The Sooners' two-guard pumped in 46 points in a game against Kansas earlier this season.

Denzel Valentine

The smooth senior guard is averaging 19.4 points per game for Michigan State, the No. 2 seed in the Midwest Region. Despite the Spartans' powerhouse program history, Valentine's story falls in the Cinderella category. He was not highly recruited out of high school and is a Lansing, Michigan, product. In 2000, home-state hero Mateen Cleaves led the Spartans to a national title. Can Valentine bring the title home to Lansing for the first time in 16 years?

Josh Hart

Unlike the NBA, you can still win a title without having one of the top two or three players in the sport. Josh Hart (15.5), Kris Jenkins (13.3) and Ryan Arcidiacono (11.9) all average double-figures in points for Villanova. If the dream all-Philly matchup of 'Nova vs. Temple goes down in Round 2, watch for Hart to avenge his performance against the Owls from the last time out. Hart had a season-low four points against Temple in February.

Grayson Allen

It'd be easy to see an "I hate Grayson Allen" documentary popping

Providence's Kris Dunn is slated to be an NBA lottery pick this June. GETTY IMAGES up in 20 years or so as the Duke star has taken the Christian Laettner/JJ Redick/Jon Scheyer torch as the most hated player in America. Allen is a serial tripper (read: He's blatantly tripped two opponents during games this season) and if you play for Duke that makes you an instant heel. The dirty (emphasis on dirty) little secret here is that Allen can play, as he saw his scoring average jump 17.2 points this season to 21.6 per game.

Kris Dunn

Dunn is getting NBA lottery buzz as he's the best playmaker in this tour-namment. He reads the floor like no other, and if the old March Madness cliché of "it's a guard's tournament" is true, then look for Dunn to lead ninth-seeded Providence past USC in the first round and maybe just maybe — past No. 1 seed North Carolina this weekend.
